How Hourly Employees Are Changing the Way Work is Scheduled

How strategic is your employee scheduling process? Innovative organizations are improving staff retention and optimizing their workforces through worker-centric scheduling strategies. Shiftboard’s "2019 State of the Hourly Worker" report provides insight into why effectively addressing employee scheduling preferences is key to optimizing workforce operations in 2020 and beyond.

Flexible work schedules are more important to hourly employees than pay and benefits. The U.S. Department of Labor defines the "flexible work schedule" as "an alternative to the traditional 9-to-5, 40-hour workweek. It allows employees to vary their arrival and/or departure times. Under some policies, employees must work a prescribed number of hours a pay period and be present during a daily ‘core time.’"
